

UNIT 2: PUBLIC VS. PRIVATE

SLIDES 1 + 2: INTRODUCTION

SLIDE 3

OBJECTIVE:

Clarify appropriate behaviours in public spaces versus private spaces. Introduce students to the topic of self-care and masturbation.

LESSON PREP (OPTIONAL):

- Personalize the Public vs. Private pre- and post-lesson assessments by using the photographs that students took of their homes in unit 1, as well as photos of the students' school and community locations (like the local public library). Add the photos to page 2 of the pre- and post-lesson assessments. Personalizing the assessments will ensure that this lesson has a bigger impact, and you can check that the learnings have really sunk in. EAs can often support with preparing the assessments.

UNIT MATERIALS:

- Computer, projector, and screen for showing the PowerPoint
- Unit 2: Public vs. Private Pre-Lesson Assessments, one per student (optional: each assessment personalized with photos of students' homes, school, and community)
- Unit 2: Public vs. Private Post-Lesson Assessments, one per student (optional: each assessment personalized with photos of students' homes, school, and community)
- Writing utensils
- Students' maps from Unit 1: Map Your World
- Popsicle sticks, 3 per student
- Paper (heavy stock): red, green, and yellow
- Printed Pennant Template on the coloured papers, enough for each student to get one pennant of each colour (Pennant Template is in the Supporting Documents folder)
- Staplers and staples, enough for the group to share
- A board or chart paper to do a group brainstorm
- Writing utensils for the board or chart paper
- Shift Education Cards teacher set, specifically: smartphone, iPad, bottom
- Shift Education Cards, one full student set per student

SLIDE 4

Read this:

In this unit, we will clarify private spaces and behaviours, and public spaces and behaviours.

For many of you, this will be a review – but sometimes the rules about spaces can be confusing, so we need to make sure we all know and understand the public and private rules.

SLIDE 5

MATERIALS:

- Unit 2: Public vs. Private Pre-Lesson Assessments, one per student (optional: each assessment personalized with photos of students' homes, school, and community)
- Writing utensils

Assessment:

Please hand out the pre-assessment for Unit 2: Public vs. Private and explain what you want the students to do. If you have personalized the assessment pages, ensure that the correct student gets the page with images of their own home as page 2. The post-assessment will be given at the end of this unit.

Assessment instructions:

Look at each picture. Each picture shows a private place or space, or a public place or space. Circle the pictures that are private spaces.

SLIDE 6

ACTIVITY: WHAT IS PUBLIC IN YOUR WORLD?

MATERIALS:

- Students' maps from Unit 1: Map Your World

Read this:

So, as we said, in this unit we will clarify public spaces and behaviours and private spaces and behaviours. For many of you, this will be a review – but sometimes the rules about spaces can be confusing, so we need to make sure we all know and understand the public and private rules.

Get out the maps you made during Unit 1. Ask your neighbour, "What is public?" Take turns pointing to the public places on your own map.

SLIDE 7

Read this:

How about these places? Are they public or private?

SLIDE 8

ACTIVITY: MAKING PENNANTS

Make flags to be used throughout the HRC. Students will wave the flags in the air in many activities, including the one in the Supporting Documents folder..

MATERIALS:

- Popsicle sticks, 3 per student
- Paper (heavy stock): red, green, and yellow
- Printed Pennant Template on the coloured papers, enough for each student to get one pennant of each colour (Pennant Template is in the Supporting Documents folder)
- Staplers and staples, enough for the group to share

Activity:

- 1) Give printed red, green, and yellow pennant paper templates to each student.
- 2) Students cut out pennants and staple the wide-bottom edge of each triangle to a popsicle stick.
- 3) Show pictures of public spaces and ask questions about public behaviour.

Read this:

We know that:

Green means yes or go, like a green traffic light. (Wave green flag in the air.)

Yellow means caution, be careful. (Wave yellow flag in the air.)

Red means stop or no. (Wave red flag in the air.)

In a moment, I will ask you all some questions. Your job is to wave a flag in the air to answer each question.

For example:

Can I sit on a seat that is free at the bus stop? (Point to the bus stop bench.)

Is that a red flag? A yellow flag? Or a green flag?

SLIDE 8 continued...

Game on:

Can I talk to the people who are sitting by me at the bus stop?

Can I tell the person I'm sitting beside where I am going?

Can I touch the person I am sitting beside?

Can I follow the person I am sitting beside?

Can I touch between my legs when I'm on the bus?

EXPECTATIONS IN PUBLIC

There may be some work to be done with individual students around expectations in public. Customize this section to your students.

ACTIVITY: PUBLIC SPACES BRAINSTORM

MATERIALS:

- Students' maps
- A board or chart paper to do a group brainstorm
- Writing utensils for the board or chart paper

Ask the students to look at their maps and share the public spaces they visit.
List them on the board.

Using the list on the board or chart paper, brainstorm what expected public behaviour looks like at each place.

For example, expected behaviour at the grocery store...

Looks like: nodding head to say hello, smiling, saying hello, asking to sit down, using please and thank you – what else?

Does not look like: spitting, farting, picking nose, yelling, sitting really close to a stranger on the bus, taking something out of another person's bag – what else?

Go through some examples and have the students use their flags to show they understand.

SLIDE 9

Read this:

How do you behave when you are in your house with family (that's public)? Discuss with group.

How do we help someone feel welcome when they visit? What would we say? What would our bodies do?

SLIDE 9 continued...

ACTIVITY: GREETING SOMEONE WHO COMES OVER

Get students to stand up and practice greeting each other:

- Knock at the door
- Answer the door
- Come in
- Shake hands
- What do you say when someone comes over? (Say good morning, hello, etc.)

ACTIVITY: SOCIAL FLAGS

MATERIALS:

- Students' green, yellow, and red flags
- Shift Education Cards teacher set, specifically: smartphone, iPad, bottom

Read this:

What about when we are talking to someone online: What are the rules about private and public then?

Let's use our flags again to answer these questions (hold up Shift Education Cards for visual cues while you're asking the questions):

Can I talk to my friend on the phone and then take my phone into the bathroom to go pee while we're talking? (Hold up the "smartphone" card and mime talking on the phone while going to the bathroom.)

Why not?

What about if I need to get changed? Can I change in front of the iPad, talking to Grandma? (Hold up "iPad" card and a "bottom" card.) What about talking to a friend from school?

Why not?

What would our friend do if we started changing in front of them?

What are some other rules when using our phones?

How many times can you text a person if they don't text back right away?

If they don't text you or message you back, do you keep texting them? Why not?

What might they be thinking, getting all those texts from you?

What would happen if I started getting mad at them on messenger, if I said, "You are so mean. I texted you so many times, and you didn't even write back. I hate you"?

SLIDE 10

ACTIVITY: PRIVATE SPACES BRAINSTORM

Brainstorm on the board or chart paper spaces that are private.

MATERIALS:

- Student's maps
- A board or chart paper to do a group brainstorm
- Writing utensils for the board or chart paper

Read this:

Let's think of some places that are private. We are going to write a list.

Name private spaces or locations.

(Answer: The only private places are the bedroom and bathroom at home, with the door closed, and the blinds or curtains closed.)

Take a look at your map and think in your head: What are the activities that I do in private? Keep those thoughts in your head – some of those activities are private.

SLIDE 11

ACTIVITY: PRIVATE ACTIVITIES

Students will use their map to contextualize the activities they do regularly and consider if the activities they do are public or private.

MATERIALS:

- Shift Education Cards, one full set per student
- Students' maps

Read this:

Take out the Shift Education cards that you see here. Point to the slide.

(Activity continued on next slide.)

SLIDE 12

ACTIVITY: PRIVATE ACTIVITIES cont'd

Read this:

Looking at the cards in front of you: What activities do you like to do alone?

Some activities that we like to do alone are not private.

What activities are private? Brainstorm on the board.

Now place all the private activities that you enjoy in front of you. If you feel more comfortable keeping the naked body parts face down, that's okay (show students what you mean). Touching one's own body is a natural activity that everyone does. We have to touch our bodies in the shower and bath, right?

FACILITATOR NOTE:

In the HRC, we are working to normalize self-care, and touching one's own body for pleasure is normal, in a private location, in a safe way – not hurting the body. We are also normalizing personal choice – some people do masturbate and some people don't.

ACTIVITY: LOCATION OF PRIVATE ACTIVITIES

MATERIALS:

- Shift Education Cards from the previous slide
- Students' maps

Read this:

Looking at your map, where do you do private activities?

Place all the private activity cards in the private locations on your map.

SLIDE 13

MATERIALS:

- Students' maps

Read this:

Cleaning and taking care of your body is private. You take care of your body in the bathroom, a private place, where you are alone.

Put up your hand if you live alone.

How long is an appropriate amount of time to be in the bathroom at home?

What if you live with someone?

What if you have to go to the bathroom and someone is in there, how do you let them know you need to go? Pretend to knock, knock, knock.

What about if you need support in the bathroom?

Turn to the people in the room who may need support – you may know who they are and you may not. Making eye contact with the students who need support is meant to be inclusive here, not single anyone out.

Some people have help in the bathroom with washing their body.

How would a helper or support worker touch your body if you needed help in the bathroom?

In the shower?

In the bath?

It is important that the people who help you are respectful of your body.

If you're someone who needs support in the bathroom – for example, you might be in a chair, need a walker, or have limited use of your hands – I want you to know what the best practice is for helpers offering support for an individual, how people should be treating you:

1. The person who is supporting you should have gloves on their hands.
2. The helper should use hand-on-hand support, so the helper's hand should be on the hand of the individual that's being cared for. The individual's hand would be the one touching their own genitals, so the hand of the care provider will not come into contact with genitals that often.
3. In the bathroom, you're completing a task. The task is bathrooming (releasing liquid waste or solid waste).
4. To show respect and dignity of the person being cared for, the helper should say out loud what you're doing while you're doing it, like, "Okay, we're all done now, so we're going to go over and wash our hands."

Who are the people who support you? Star people, doctors, support workers – look at your map.

Is it important that these support people touch you with care, in a way that feels safe?

Is it important that they give you time to yourself, when you ask for it?

Why should people touch themselves (motion own body) in a safe way? In a respectful way? In a gentle way?

Why do you deserve time alone?

SLIDE 13 continued...

If you needed physical support, how could you ask for time alone?

You might say, “I want to sit in the bath by myself now. I want privacy.”

For your safety, depending on the situation and if you are safe in the water on your own, your support person may need to leave the door open a little. In your room alone, you can also ask for privacy.

People use private time to take care of themselves – to recharge their bodies, to rest their minds, to rejuvenate. Taking care of your mind, body, and spirit (feelings) is really important. Privacy is a human right.

Remember we spoke about human rights?

What are human rights?

Rights are agreed upon rules of how all people, everyone in this room, everyone you know, has the right to be treated with dignity (honour), respect, and care.

That means, you have the right to be safe:

Remember safety means you feel comfortable most of the time, with a warm home, food, water, and loving care. You have the right to be free from sexual abuse and exploitation. You have the right to privacy, time alone.

SLIDE 14

If you’re looking for more detailed pictures on what this looks like, check out the Supporting Documents folder for ‘Masturbation Slides’. This may not be suitable for every class.

Read this:

Some people touch their body in loving ways, when they are alone, in their bedroom or bathroom, with the door closed and the curtains or blinds closed.

You are the boss of your body and you get to decide what feels good on your body.

In an upcoming lesson, we will learn the names of the body parts and talk about how different body parts work.

You may know the name clitoris, vulva, vagina, and breasts. These are sensitive and private parts on what we’d typically call a female or girl’s body. (But could someone have a vulva, vagina, and breasts and feel in their heart like a boy? Yes! And could someone have a penis and identify, in their heart, as a girl? Yes! And could someone feel in their hearts as neither one or the other all the time? Yes!)

We will also be learning about the changes that happen to our bodies as we grow from kid bodies to adult bodies.

You are the boss of your own body, so if you want to touch your body in private, in your bedroom or your bathroom with the door closed and the curtains or blinds closed, you can. In fact, many people touch their body, and rub their genitals to relax, reduce stress, learn about what feels good on their body, and to enjoy their individual sexuality (feelings and thoughts in their head when they are alone). Most people, regardless of their gender, touch their bodies in this loving way. Each person gets to decide for themselves if they want to touch their body and how they want to touch their body.

Some people will do this in the shower or the bath – they may have a particular way of washing that feels good. It's just another different thing people do in the bathroom. Maybe they sing in the shower. Maybe they like a particular type of soap or shampoo.

Everyone is different. You are the boss of your body, and you know what is right for you.

It's important to touch your body in a kind and gentle way, and to take care of your body.

Some people with penises rub their penis in loving ways in their bedroom or their bathroom with the door closed and the curtain or blinds closed. They do this to feel relaxed, to learn about their body, to experience their individual sexuality (their thoughts and feelings). We will spend more time talking about how the body works and what happens physically to your body when you masturbate or touch and rub your genitals.

Right now, we are focusing on what activities are private and what activities are public.

Touching your genitals is always private.

You can touch your genitals, penis or vulva and vagina, in your bedroom when the door is closed and the curtains or blinds are closed. Your bedroom at home is private when the door is closed. But if you share a bedroom with someone else, it is not private when they are in the bedroom with you. If you normally share a bedroom, the only truly private place in your house is the bathroom in your home, with the door locked.

Not all bathrooms are private. The bathroom at school is not private. The bathroom at the community centre is not private. Only your bathroom at your house, with the door closed, is private.

So the only time you'd be touching your genitals, penis or vulva and vagina, at school is if you're urinating (peeing) in the bathroom. Save touching your genitals for pleasure for when you're at home in your bedroom or bathroom alone, with the door closed and the windows and blinds closed.

MATERIALS:

- Unit 2: Public vs. Private Post-Lesson Assessments, one per student (optional: each assessment personalized with photos of students' homes, school, and community)
- Writing utensils

Assessment:

Please hand out the post-assessment for Unit 2: Public vs. Private and explain what you want the students to do. If you have personalized the assessment pages, ensure that the correct student gets the page with images of their own home as page 2. When you're done the assessments, record the students' results in the HRC Assessment Tracking document.

Assessment instructions:

Look at each picture. Each picture shows a private place or space, or a public place or space. Circle the pictures that are private spaces.
